RECEPTION ENJOYED BY CUBAN TEACHERS

They Danced and Heartily Entered Into the Festivities.

THEIR TIME MUCH OCCUPIED.

Senorita Lluy Makes a Plea in Behalf of the Interpreters, and Also for Some Women Who Are in Need in Cuba.

The reception to the Cuban teachers and the members of the regular Harvard summer school was an entire success, septite the fact that an unusually busy law keep many of the tired-out teachers it home. Dancing was the chief feature of the reception.

Not a few of the teachers are beginning to find that the combined pressure of school and social dutien is becoming to find that the combined pressure of school and social dutien is becoming the beauty of the strongth. "I would not be surprised it many of us become in the season of the press to ask the ladies of Boston and Cambridge to give some sort of feature in the strongth." I would not help the surprised it many of us become in the season of the senoritas as kind to us, and the invitations are so kind to us, and the invitations are so kind to us, and the invitations are of us want to miss any of the studies and do not instead to."

Two case concests were given yesterday, one in the afternoon, the other in the eventue, at the residence of Miss a L. Pags. The congerts were conducted by the Danvers Woman's Association, the proceeds applying to the benefit of the proceeds applying to the benefit of the Sunari leaders of the proceeds applying to the benefit of the cuban leachers' fund.

(BY SENORITA PILAR LLUY.)

The reception given last night to the Cuban teachers was fine, though many did not assist, for they were tired. Those who went seemed to enjoy themselves erry much. It seemed very original how they could keep time with the musit of the danzon, although everyone danced their own way.

Among the distinguished guests were fir. Frye, Miss Longfellow and Miss Irwin.

Some of the Cuban teachers who know how difficult the old Castillian language is, found that some of the works translated in the text books are very poor ones, though they enjoy very much their classes, for they think they get knowledge it can many handsome women who would give lessons in shorthand and typewriting, for there is not an academy or hardly any teacher in Havana who can teach it in the English language. LEWISTON, Me., July 11.—With the nomination of the Hon. Samuel L. Lord of Saco for Governor, and the hearty indorsement of the Kansas City platform, the Democratic State convention this afternoon opened the political campaign in Maine.

The convention was both harmonious and enthusiastic, and mention of the names of Bryan and Stevenson was long and vigorously cheered. The platform adopted had several State planks, chief of these being the decouncement of alleged Republican extravagance in administration and a demand for the resubmission. the United States District Court

For nearly half a century the great sporting event of the year in this part of the country has been the Scotch picnic. This year the Boston Caledonian Club has offered a prize list that is sure to make that event, which is to be held at the club's grove, Spring street, West Roxbury, Aug. 18, a record breaker. The amount which the club is to give away in prizes is larger than that ever offered by any organization. Profiting by past experience, the club has arranged a list of games for this year's picnic that insures a large entry list and keener competitions. In all there are thirty-three events on the programme, thirteen of which are open only to members of the Caledonian clubs, while the rest are open to the world. The club in making up the prizes for each event has shown its usual liberality, and the professional runners, jumpers and athletes have something worthy of trying for. Many of the crack professionals are now in training in this city.

A happy lot of children gathered at the Eastern avenue wharf yestarday morning to take the trip on the steamer J. Putnam Bredlee. The children, about 100 in number, were from the various Jewish charitable organisations of the city, and the excursion was under the auspices of the Randidge fund.

'In charge was Max Mitchell, superintendent of the Federation of Jawish Charitten, assisted by several of the teachers and matrons of the various institutions. At Long Island all ward landed for a good time at the Randidge picula grounds.

The Rumor Denied by E. J. Boyle for His Brother and Himself.

And Incidentally He Submits to an Inter-esting Interview About "Progress,". "Evolution," "Innovations," and Some Other Things.

"If you are familiar with the principle underlying our business you are cognisant that the prominent factor in our methods is to radiate the fact that the wage-earner possesses the inherent right to trade credit; that this right is his more than any class in the community; that once in the enjoyment of that right he will treat it as a liberty, not as a license. In conformity with this idea we have conducted our business. We proceeded on the principle that the wage-earner is both a thinking and an honest citizen, and when you find those virtues united you are up against an invulnerable proposition. We gave the wage-earner the chance to disprove our faith. But instead of showing we were wrong ble proposition. We gave the wageearner the chance to disprove our faith.
But instead of showing we were wrong he has profitably proven we were right.

"When we originated our 'No Money Down' system—and, by the way, we were permitted to enjoy the exclusive fruit of that system for five months before followers and imitators adopted it—the wage-earner found we treated him in our store as we promised in our advertisements, and that our goods were not nailed to the counters and no string was attached to the buttonhole of a garment with the ball thereto in the cashier's drawer; we obtained his confidence and likewise his patronage; we have never abused the former, we trust we shall not lose the latter.

"Our first radical change from the cash to the credit system has been followed by other innovations, all tending to make trading with us easy and free of all embarrassments."

"Have you succeeded in eliminating all the disagreeable features usually attendant upon an application for credit?"
asked the interviewer.

"You may answer your own question," said Mr. Boyle, "when you've heard the system explained, aithough none can answer your question so effectively as our 15,000 patrons.

"A stranger comes into our store. He

"A stranger comes into our store. He selects, say, a suit of clothes. He says his name is Smith, that he lives on street, and that he works for the Elevated Railway Company; that he wishes to purchase a suit. He takes the suit, leaving only his promise to pay when he can. He has our goods. We have his promise."

is as good as ever, and is indispensable for a little treat when a friend drops in. Buy from grocers, druggists or wine merchants, or from the manufacturers, C. H. GRAVES & SONS, said Mr. Boyle, "by asking you one. Do you suppose there is a wholesaler or a manufacturer in the country who would refuse to sell goods to anyone who effered each in payment?

"No, our losses are not tremendous. How can you loss when your patrons are honest? Occasionally a patron meets with mistortune and purhaps a few of them are negligent; but generally speaking they are mindful of their promises and conscientious in fulfilments, simply and solely because they are everlastingly and ruggedly honest.

"In our opinion, based on long and active experience, the wage-carner is the strength, the brain and the hope of a nation. He is a timid bird by virtue of training and environment, but his timidity can readily be overcome by removing the embarrassments usually to be found in credit houses; and then he is as courageous as the lion, as keen as a hawk, as gentle as a dove, and his lively appreciation and inherent love of fair treatment is crystallized into the Honest chair and referring to the runor that his brother Thomas F. and he were to visit on the Continent this summer.

"It was our purpose to take such a rest as only an ocean voyage can give, but we find our business is too active, even though this be the dull season, to take ourselves away from it. While it is true that our business is so systematized and regulated that department managers and assistants have but to follow the rules, yet we find our presence is helpful, and as our business is steadily increasing we concluded we would remain at home this summer.

"Whatever success has come to us is the result of parsonal management, for the history of our business is the history of experiments, evolution and progress.

We welcome any suggestion in the line of progress and we have the courage to undertake innovations. We believe we do not adopt innovations without due and proper consideration, although some of our radical changes have feeled to the wares he buys. Not ask time the follow of the wares he buys.
